THE CASE

On 28 May UiPath reported first-quarter fiscal 2027 revenue of $418M, up 17% year on year, ARR of $1.901B and GAAP operating income of $28M, its first GAAP-profitable quarter. Cash, equivalents and marketable securities stood at $1.42B and the board authorised a $500M buyback in March; full-year guidance is $1.776-1.781B of revenue. Founder Daniel Dines returned as CEO in June 2024 and has re-positioned the company around agentic automation: software robots, AI agents and orchestration in one governed system. Marketing sits with Michael Atalla, CMO since August 2025 after F5 and fifteen years at Microsoft.

The enterprise-software archetype is already priced on the grid: ServiceNow sits with Aston Martin Aramco, SAP with Mercedes, and Salesforce is a Formula 1 global partner. UiPath has never held a motorsport position. A first profitable quarter, a founder back in the chair and a new CMO with a brand to rebuild is the moment a public software company can justify a global platform to its board.

WHY NOW

The profitable quarter landed on 28 May; a CMO nine months in seat is building his first full fiscal-year plan, and UiPath's fiscal 2028 begins on 1 February 2027. Austin (October) and Las Vegas (November) are the American team's home rounds, and 2027 rosters close in the fourth quarter.

BOTTOM LINE

A first GAAP-profitable quarter on 28 May, $1.42B of cash and a CMO rebuilding the brand around agentic AI give UiPath the budget and the motive; the automation lane at Haas is open and the two US rounds sit inside the window.

WHY TGR HAAS F1 TEAM

Haas is the grid's American privateer, headquartered in Kannapolis, North Carolina, with Toyota Gazoo Racing as title partner from 2026 and Mphasis, Haas Automation and Ruckus on the technology side. No enterprise-automation, AI-agent or workflow partner sits on the car, so the category is open at a price a first-time sponsor can defend to a public-company board. A US team with three home races suits a New York brand, and the leanest team most needs back-office hours turned into car spend.

VALUE TO TGR HAAS F1 TEAM — MODE A (TECH IN THE CAR / CHAMPIONSHIP)

MODE A - operational. The leanest team on the grid runs a 24-race supply chain across Kannapolis, Banbury and Maranello under the cost cap. UiPath's agents and document robots take the paperwork: customs and carnet documents for flyaway freight, supplier invoices and purchase orders, and the ledger work behind the FIA cost-cap submission. Hours saved there are spend redirected to the car. In return: Official Automation Partner status, livery presence, Austin and Las Vegas hospitality.

DEAL ARCHITECTURE

Entry as Official Enterprise Automation Partner. THREE YEARS, 2027-2029, aligned to UiPath's fiscal years from February 2027. Estimated $3-5M a year, part-deliverable as platform licences. Scope: sidepod placement, driver access, Austin and Las Vegas hospitality, a cost-cap automation case study.

PRIMARY DECISION-MAKER

Michael Atalla

CHIEF MARKETING OFFICER, UIPATH · VERIFIED

Atalla joined UiPath as CMO on 25 August 2025 from F5, where he led worldwide marketing, after about fifteen years at Microsoft. He owns brand, demand and communications. Path: Daniel Dines, Founder and CEO; Ashim Gupta, CFO and COO.

OPENING ANGLE

Lead with the profitable quarter.

“Michael, UiPath just posted its first GAAP-profitable quarter and you are nine months into rebuilding the brand around agents. No automation company sits on the F1 grid and the lane at the American team is open. 25 minutes before Austin?”

RISKS & COUNTERS

PROFIT, NOT A RAISE The trigger is an earnings milestone, not fresh capital; a public company's marketing budget is set on the fiscal-year cycle. Counter: Size the entry to the fiscal-2028 plan now being built; offer platform licences as part of the consideration.

CATEGORY IS NEW TO F1 No automation vendor has bought a team partnership; the board will ask what ServiceNow or Salesforce got from theirs. Counter: Lead with the cost-cap workstream: a documented case study is the asset UiPath's enterprise sellers can reuse.
