THE CASE

UiPath is the enterprise-automation leader pivoting hard into agentic AI - software agents that orchestrate and execute work across a company's systems. FY2026 was an inflection: its first profitable full year ($57M operating income, $282M net income), $1.9B ARR up 12%, $1.7B cash and no debt, with AI-product ARR (agentic automation, intelligent document processing, the Maestro orchestration layer) reaching ~$200M. Founder-CEO Daniel Dines is back at the helm framing the agentic-orchestration thesis, and a brand-new CMO - Michael Atalla (ex-Microsoft, ex-F5), appointed August 2025 - was hired to elevate exactly this story. No automation or agentic-AI orchestration brand sits anywhere on the F1 grid, so the category is open, and UiPath is a profitable, cash-rich company with the means to own it.

WHY NOW

Two clocks align. First, a new CMO (Atalla, Aug 2025) is in the window when marquee brand investments get defined - and he was hired specifically to elevate UiPath's agentic-AI leadership. Second, the agentic-AI category is in a land-grab for enterprise mindshare, and UiPath's first profitable year gives it both the confidence and the balance sheet to invest in brand. The open automation lane on the grid is cheap to plant now, before a peer notices it.

BOTTOM LINE

A founder-led, newly-profitable enterprise-automation leader ($1.9B ARR, agentic-AI ARR ~$200M) with a brand-new CMO hired to drive its agentic story - and no automation brand on the F1 grid. McLaren's enterprise audience is UiPath's buyer; the lane is open and ownable now.

WHY MCLAREN

McLaren is the fit: the grid's deepest enterprise-software partner roster (Dell, Salesforce, Workday, Google) means a proven hospitality machine aimed at exactly the CIO/COO/automation buyers UiPath sells to, and a premium, technology-forward brand that mirrors UiPath's 'orchestration' positioning. The automation category is uncontested there. Aston Martin (boardroom enterprise audience) and Williams (data/engineering) are documented alternatives.

VALUE TO MCLAREN — MODE A (TECH IN THE CAR / CHAMPIONSHIP)

MODE A (developing) - real substance, not signage. (1) TECHNICAL/OPERATIONAL: an F1 team runs on sprawling, repetitive back-office and engineering workflows - parts procurement and logistics across a global calendar, supplier onboarding, finance and compliance ops, and data movement between simulation, telemetry and strategy systems. That is exactly what UiPath's agentic automation and orchestration layer attacks: automating and orchestrating those processes so engineers and operations staff spend time on performance, not paperwork. A defined workstream (automating the team's logistics/finance/data ops with agentic orchestration) is genuine operational value and a flagship reference deployment. (2) COMMERCIAL: McLaren's enterprise-software partner audience - the CIOs, COOs and automation buyers UiPath sells to - is exactly its market, so race-weekend hospitality becomes a working enterprise pipeline channel, with co-marketing across UiPath's large enterprise base. (3) CONTENT & TALENT: an 'automation behind a winning team' content platform and a joint engineering/AI-talent narrative. The team gains real operational efficiency plus aligned co-marketing; UiPath gains a live, referenceable deployment and a premium enterprise stage for its agentic-AI story.

DEAL ARCHITECTURE

Official Automation / Agentic AI Partner tier on McLaren, minimum three years, estimated $4-6M/yr (calibrated to $1.9B ARR and profitability), with category exclusivity for automation/agentic-AI orchestration, a working automation deployment across the team's operations, and B2B hospitality + content aimed at UiPath's enterprise buyers.

PRIMARY DECISION-MAKER

Michael Atalla

CHIEF MARKETING OFFICER, UIPATH (APPOINTED AUG 2025) - VERIFIED

Michael Atalla joined UiPath as CMO in August 2025 (previously SVP/ Head of Worldwide Marketing at F5, and ~15 years at Microsoft) to elevate UiPath's agentic-AI brand - so a marquee sponsorship sits squarely in his new mandate. Co-decision-maker: founder & CEO Daniel Dines, who owns the agentic-orchestration thesis and marquee spend.

OPENING ANGLE

"Michael, you came in to make UiPath the name in agentic AI - and there's no automation brand anywhere on the F1 grid. McLaren's hospitality is full of the CIOs and COOs you sell to, with a real automation workstream behind the badge. 25 minutes?"

SCORE COMPOSITION

TIMING 16 / 20 A new CMO (Michael Atalla, Aug 2025) hired specifically to elevate the agentic-AI brand is in the window when marquee investments get defined; layered on UiPath's first profitable year - confidence and budget to invest now.	CAPACITY 19 / 20 $1.9B ARR (+12%), first profitable full year ($57M operating income, $282M net income), $1.7B cash and no debt - a marquee multi-year deal is immaterial.	BRAND FIT 17 / 20 Enterprise automation / agentic-AI orchestration is uncontested on the F1 grid, and McLaren's enterprise-software audience is exactly UiPath's buyer.	URGENCY 13 / 20 The agentic-AI category is in a mindshare land-grab, but there is no competitor-on-grid or dated calendar anchor.	OPS FIT 15 / 20 MODE A (developing): agentic automation/orchestration applied to a team's logistics, finance and data workflows is a genuine operational workstream, not signage.

RISKS & COUNTERS

PUBLIC-MARKET SPEND DISCIPLINE Newly profitable and watched by investors, UiPath will scrutinise discretionary brand spend. Counter: Frame on measurable enterprise pipeline + a working ops-automation reference deployment (ROI, not vanity); the first-profitable-year balance sheet supports a calibrated multi-year tier.

AGENTIC-AI NARRATIVE IS CROWDED Every enterprise-software firm now claims 'agentic AI'. Counter: F1 is the differentiator - owning the automation lane on the grid is a distinct, ownable position no rival holds, anchored to a real team deployment.
