THE CASE

TwelveLabs announced on 1 July 2026 a $100M Series B co-led by NEA and NAVER Ventures, with Amazon, Radical Ventures, Korea Investment Partners, Index Ventures, Quadrille Capital and Red Bull Ventures, taking total funding to roughly $150M. Amazon made AWS its preferred cloud in a multi-year commitment built on Trainium chips. The money opens offices in New York and London alongside San Francisco and Seoul. Its Marengo and Pegasus models already serve NFL Media and Maple Leaf Sports & Entertainment, which use them to find exact moments in game footage and package content faster.

Red Bull Ventures, the group's corporate venture arm launched in 2025 with a €200M fund and led by Nai-Tseng Chen, Red Bull's Global Head of Corporate Finance, calls TwelveLabs its most prominent investment. That is a structural introduction to both Red Bull teams, not a sponsorship. The grid's nearest incumbents are cloud and data platforms, which TwelveLabs runs on rather than against, so the category is a new line on a roster, not a displacement.

WHY NOW

The round closed on 1 July, and the New York and London offices it funds are a brand programme in the two cities where sports media buys technology. Teams set 2027 rosters in the fourth quarter; the United States GP (Austin, October) and Las Vegas GP (November) are the US stages.

BOTTOM LINE

A $100M Series B, Amazon as preferred cloud and Red Bull Ventures on the cap table give TwelveLabs a fresh budget and a structural path into the Red Bull teams. The video-intelligence lane at Racing Bulls is open and the product would be used every race weekend.

WHY VISA CASH APP RACING BULLS

Racing Bulls is the grid's content team: CEO Peter Bayer told Sector that 60 per cent of fans rated its content excellent in F1's latest monitoring report, clear of the field, and its Creator Platform puts young fans to work inside the team. The technology roster is data and observability, Dynatrace and Confluent, with no video-AI partner. Red Bull Ventures already holds TwelveLabs equity, so the introduction exists, and the entry price fits a company that has raised $150M.

VALUE TO VISA CASH APP RACING BULLS — MODE A (TECH IN THE CAR / CHAMPIONSHIP)

MODE A - operational. Every session produces hours of onboard, garage and broadcast video nobody can search. TwelveLabs indexes it: the content team finds Lindblad's debut points or every Lawson pit stop from one camera in seconds, cuts clips while the session runs, and hands the Creator Platform tagged footage. Engineers get the same search over pit-stop and incident video. In return: a named partnership, livery presence, Austin and Las Vegas hospitality.

DEAL ARCHITECTURE

Entry as Official Video Intelligence Partner. THREE YEARS, 2027-2029, covering the New York and London build-out and the next raise. Estimated $1.5-2.5M a year, part-payable in platform usage. Scope: nose or endplate placement, naming of the video-search environment, Creator Platform integration, US hospitality.

OPENING ANGLE

Lead with the Red Bull Ventures link.

“Jae, Red Bull Ventures backed you a month ago, and its racing teams sit on the most valuable video archive in sport nobody can search. Racing Bulls has no video partner. 25 minutes before Austin to see the numbers?”

RISKS & COUNTERS

CAPACITY Roughly $150M raised in total; a multi-year sponsorship competes with the New York and London office spend just announced. Counter: Size it at the entry tier, part-paid in platform usage, with the Red Bull group as reference customer.

INVESTOR, NOT PARTNER Red Bull Ventures is a minority participant; nothing obliges the racing teams to buy or brand the product. Counter: Use the introduction, then win the deal on a paid pilot with the content team first.
