

Snyk

Developer Security · Boston, MA / London · Private (last primary ~$7.4B, 2021; ~$325M ARR; IPO delayed/uncertain)

Developer-security leader Snyk (~$325M ARR) is heading toward an IPO with BOTH its CEO and CMO seats in transition and no motorsport footprint - a leadership reset that is the ideal, if messy, moment to plant a category-defining grid idea before a DevSecOps rival does.

THE CASE

Snyk is a well-funded developer-security leader - ~$325M ARR, 4,800+ customers, $435M in the bank and a clear path to break-even - on a (delayed) IPO track. The defining dynamic now is a dual leadership reset: CEO Peter McKay announced in February 2026 that he will step down once a successor is found, and the CMO seat has been vacant since Jonaki Egenolf left for XBOW in November 2025. Both brand-owning seats are being re-decided - the ideal moment to plant a sponsorship thesis the incoming leaders inherit. The strategic prize: developer/application security is uncontested on the F1 grid (the same whitespace JFrog and Sonatype eye), so a first mover owns the lane. The honest counterweight: a dual vacancy can also stall a decision, so this is a relationship-and-thesis play, not a quick close.

WHY NOW

Both the CEO and CMO seats are resetting at once - the rare window when the framing set now defines whatever the incoming leaders execute. Layer on the open DevSecOps category (which locks the moment a rival signs) and a pre-IPO brand rationale, and the case for planting the idea now is strong - provided it is pitched as a ready-made win for the incoming team, not a deal that needs a sitting CMO to close.

BOTTOM LINE

A ~$325M-ARR developer-security leader with BOTH its CEO and CMO seats in transition - the rare moment to plant a category-defining grid idea that incoming leaders inherit. Developer security is uncontested on the F1 grid; Aston Martin is the CISO-credible home. A thesis-and-relationship play, not a quick close.

WHY ASTON MARTIN

Aston Martin's CISO-grade gravitas and premium, technically-credible identity place Snyk's 'secure by design' story directly in front of the enterprise security buyers it sells to. If Aston Martin's inventory is constrained, Williams (data/engineering revival) is a credible alternative with the right audience profile.

VALUE TO ASTON MARTIN — MODE A (TECH IN THE CAR / CHAMPIONSHIP)

MODE A. Snyk integrates security directly into developer workflows, and an F1 team's expanding in-house software estate is a real testbed and reference deployment. A deal can be built around securing the team's own development pipeline, giving the team genuine operational value and Snyk an authentic 'official developer-security partner' narrative plus CISO-level hospitality - substance on both sides, not signage.

DEAL ARCHITECTURE

Official Developer Security Partner tier on Aston Martin, minimum three years, ~$3-4M/yr (calibrated to ~$325M ARR), with developer-security category exclusivity and a working integration into the team's development pipeline.

PRIMARY DECISION-MAKER

Peter McKay
CEO (STEPPING DOWN, SUCCESSOR TBD) - VERIFIED; CMO SEAT ALSO VACANT (EGENOLF LEFT NOV 2025)

Snyk's brand leadership is in a dual reset: CEO Peter McKay announced in Feb 2026 he will step down once a successor is found, and the CMO seat has been vacant since Jonaki Egenolf left for XBOW (Nov 2025). The entry point is therefore transitional - the value is to plant a ready-made sponsorship thesis now that the incoming CEO and CMO inherit on day one. Engage McKay and the board while the reset is underway; the framing set now shapes whoever lands the seats.

OPENING ANGLE

"Peter, with both the CEO and CMO seats resetting, the smartest move is to hand your successors a ready-made win - own developer security on the F1 grid before JFrog or Sonatype do. Worth 25 minutes to shape the thesis?"

SCORE COMPOSITION

TIMING 13 / 20 A dual leadership reset: CEO Peter McKay announced (Feb 2026) he will step down once a successor is found, and the CMO seat is vacant (Egenolf left to XBOW, Nov 2025) - the framing set now shapes whoever inherits, though the vacuum can also stall a decision.	CAPACITY 16 / 20 ~$325M ARR, 4,800+ customers and $435M in the bank with a path to break-even; valuation is ambiguous (last primary ~$7.4B in 2021; secondary marks lower).	BRAND FIT 16 / 20 Developer and application security sits in uncontested grid whitespace (the same JFrog/Sonatype eye).	URGENCY 12 / 20 If a DevSecOps rival signs first the category locks - but the IPO is delayed and leadership is mid-reset, so the clock is softer than it looks.	OPS FIT 15 / 20 MODE A: an F1 team's growing in-house software estate is a genuine developer-security surface and reference deployment.

RISKS & COUNTERS

DUAL LEADERSHIP VACUUM With the CEO stepping down and the CMO seat vacant, a marquee decision could stall awaiting new hires. Counter: Pitch a turnkey thesis the incoming leaders inherit; pre-frame it now with McKay and the board so it's a day-one win, not a cold start.

IPO DELAYED / SPEND DISCIPLINE The listing is not imminent and the path-to-break-even posture favours visible efficiency. Counter: Lock category exclusivity now at a pre-IPO price; the open DevSecOps lane is the asset, and it disappears the moment a rival signs.
